PART-B

1 × 4 Marks = 04 Marks

UNIT-I

1. In Nepal, a spontaneous youth-led protest—popularly known as the Nagarik Andolan—after revelations of alleged corruption involving fake cooperatives and misuse of public funds. Gen-Z citizens, mobilised largely through social media, gathered peacefully to demand ethical governance, transparency, and accountability from institutions (i.e., the system/ government/ society). This movement, driven by ordinary young people rather than political parties, reflects a generational shift toward civic engagement and moral responsibility. Is it ethically justified for young citizens to engage in such activism, when formal channels of accountability exist, even though they may be slow or ineffective? Support your answer by examining how this protest reflects or challenges civic virtue, moral autonomy, and proactive ethical involvement from a society's point of view.	CO-1	BL-4

(OR)

2. Illustrate the Maslow's pyramid and reflect on how it represents not just a hierarchy of needs but also underlies a personal and social context of values, morals, ethics, and empathy. Justify your answer, with suitable examples if needed, while defining the relevant keywords in the question.	CO-1	BL-3

UNIT-II

3. How can an individual cultivate and maintain moral character? Explain your answer with reference to the concepts of conscientiousness, integrity, and empathy, supporting it with suitable examples.	CO-2	BL-2

(OR)

4. In the "Nagarik Andolan" protests mentioned in Question 1 above, young people turned to platforms like Discord to elect and rally behind a new leader. Considering Kohlberg's and/or Gilligan's theory of moral development, critically analyse whether it is appropriate for leaders to be chosen by individuals who may still be in the pre-conventional or conventional stages of moral reasoning. Justify your answer with specific aspects of either theory. Briefly comment on how technology is providing solutions while also posing new ethical, social, and legal challenges, in the context that those who chose the recent interim Prime Minister of Nepal on Discord servers may not even be citizens of Nepal!	CO-2	BL-4

UNIT-III

5. Outline the roles and responsibilities of a professional, with examples that justify the role of an engineer as a professional.	CO-3	BL-2

(OR)

6. Do you think DEIA considerations important in a professional environment? Justify your answer.	CO-3	BL-4
